Using the slicers above, you can explore the data by continent or country and see it displayed in this report. Through the initial exploration of the world population data, we can see some fascinating trends. One of these, as visualized by the charts encircling this box, is that the population is widely concentrated on the Continent of Asia. Asia contains four of the ten most populous countries in the world and over fifty percent of the world population with the highest population density of any other continent.
